

GENESIS FOR THE NEW SPACE AGE

Secret Development of the Round-
Wing Plane, the Extra-Terrestrials
Inside the Earth, and the Arrival of the Outer-Terrestrials

by John B. Leith © 1980

Introduction

Some of the most closely guarded secrets of this century—and perhaps since time began—will be discovered within the pages of this book. At the heart of the long-kept secrets is the phenomenon, euphemistically known as unidentified flying objects [UFOs], which certain nations of this world have developed with the aid of outer-terrestrials from other planets.

The manuscript is entirely original, from primary sources, most of which must remain anonymous. Over 100 interviews were conducted. Research for the project took three years of two men's time, plus thousands of hours contributed freely by others, some of whom placed their careers in jeopardy to do so. Material was gathered mostly in the USA, but also visited were the USSR, Mexico, Germany, Canada, France, England, Spain, Brazil and the Vatican.

Washington was where the real struggle was fought to pry the truth from bureaucratic vaults. During the task of researching projects related to the UFOs, a few allies who wanted the entire story explained were gradually located in all walks of the capitol's life. Some of those who came to our aid were senators, congressmen, top military men in all the services and high-ranking civil servants as well as agents and retired agents of the Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Through the efforts of all those sympathetic people, the book was completed. Its contents simply attempt to open up, without apology, the postwar history of the so-called UFO for examination.

The USA and Canada as well as Britain and Germany are the main custodians of the secret UFO knowledge revealed herein. But only in such a freedom-loving nation as the USA could there have surfaced bold men willing to defy tradition and disclose the buried facts about the new age of visiting spaceships and inner and outer terrestrials.

The manuscript did not begin on a theme re development of the so-called UFO. It was started more as a doubtful question about the phenomenon in general, and as ensuing facts were enlarged the story of an international competition was recognised which had begun in the 1930s and which the authors labelled "the Space Race". Quite soon, in the uncovering of additional information, it became apparent that Earth was no longer a singular planet on which men looked and listened for the reality of similar life elsewhere in the universe. Instead, it was evident that Earth itself was that sphere in this solar system which sister planets had been monitoring closely for years. "We were not alone" was the discovery which we, the authors, and countless others had made. But who would believe that report if we were to tell? This was the mind-boggling dilemma.

Right from the start it was anticipated that much of the new information sought on the space age could not be freed from security wraps for national defence reasons, which indeed proved to be so. Sympathetic to this corollary, the authors did not inquire at all into military secrets. But a recurring irritation was the unavailability of certain material of related UFO importance which will not be released for 50 years from its happening. That keeps many relevant events hidden till the 1990s or later. In this latter case, perhaps only history, or time, or unknown witnesses will come forward to expose the truth.

But aside from the military considerations, this explosive knowledge had also been suppressed simply because of its phenomenal and disquieting aspects and the effect they would have in the public mind and spirit.

THE TWILIGHT ZONE

Nevertheless, if the story of man's sudden immersion into the interplanetary world of extraterrestrials isn't unfolded in part, at least, its telling may come too late. For the inhabited solar system in which we dwell and the equally inhabited space beyond is far more complex than the average intelligent person would realise. It is in fact a universe of principalities and powers which have traditionally been visiting and perhaps seeding planet Earth for a thousand millenniums and which probably will continue whether or not we accept their incredible reality. It is this knowledge that will confound most religionists and many scientists and educators in the next span of years more than any other current revelation about outer space. An eminent physicist of Stanford University has stated that "committed Christians of all faiths will likely be the most unbelieving—as in Galileo's time".

It may be that the greatest danger to the thoughtful reader will be his despondent reflection that God does not exist or at least has become remote and impersonal. On the other hand, the revised rationale of the agnostic may be to elevate man into God's abode, raising man's ego-image still higher. But what to rightly believe will become self-evident to thoughtful people when they know for certain that the horizons of the heavens are endless and that there is a Force unlimited by time and space which must be omnipotent and omnipresent to fashion and turn the endless wheels of the cosmos, wherein Earthman may be only an insignificant figure.

For those who will think this material is science fiction in disguise, they are asked to delay judgment until the conclusion of the book. Meanwhile, a few of the problems encountered are shared with the reader.

One foreign government complained to the US State Department that its embassy staff were being badgered by the authors. In another country, the stay of the researcher was cut short when he was asked to leave. The Vatican registered a strong diplomatic protest with the President of the USA that one of its top emissaries was interrogated and forcibly searched while bringing material into the USA for the authors. A special hearing of congressional and senate committees met in Washington to act on the refusal by a government agency to release unclassified information as required under the Freedom of Information Act. In another case, the researcher was taken into custody for attempting to photograph non-classified National Archives exhibits, and an executive order was secured to release him from detention. And just as offensive was a forceful reminder that the collecting of information and pictures from our former German enemies was treason under a still-existing wartime statute.

The drama of subterfuge on both sides went on and on, and in itself would comprise a book of skirmishes with the military and science worlds that would be both laughable and yet lamentable. But as the story of the round-wing plane unfolds, it will be realised how the authorities became committed to a bond of silence going back 30 years. Nevertheless, the gathering of information for this book was not simply a game of the pen versus the sword. It was a rivalry of serious intent by the authors and those who came to their aid to persuade the government sources to reveal long-overdue facts on the UFO enigma. And for those opposing forces who had been made keepers of the secret by the previous generation, it was a concerted attempt to dissuade the authors to go home and forget about UFOs and the nation's possible involvement.

But curiously, the whole series of episodes has produced a grudging respect for the thrust of science in the free world and the hidden might of its military. Only in a democracy could the forces of constraint and openness meet in confrontation, and the lesser of the two protagonists be allowed to survive and tell of the struggle.

As this century ends, a reluctant United States has been shoved onto the world's stage at the most critical time of our civilisation. Whether America likes this role or not, she and her friends are the star players who must take major parts in shaping this planet's destiny here and beyond. For far from being weaklings, the USA and her allies are the noble giants who hold aloft over our planet the shield that would keep our world intact and still free.

Earth under Surveillance

The Sun was two o'clock high on June 24, 1947, over Mount Rainier in Washington state, USA. A commercial pilot flying northerly in a clear sky over the Cascade Mountains fixed his sight to the left where a flash had occurred at the 10,000-foot elevation of the towering mountain. As the experienced 50-year-old Kenneth Arnold scanned the reflection, little did he think that his description of the objects seen near the burst of light would result in the coining of a new universal word.

Here is how Arnold expressed himself that afternoon, as reported later in newspapers around the world: "The nine objects I saw flew like saucers, if you skipped them across the water." Although what Arnold saw was highly technical, he pictured it in a simple, idiomatic term which thereafter caught the imagination of kings and commoners across the globe.

"Hello. I'd like to report an Unidentified Frying Object."

Thus was born the age of flying saucers in the 20th century. And no one, scientist or seer, could turn back the clock ticking toward the arrival of the new aerial age. Hundreds of thousands of similar sightings in the current years would leave the world divided about the controversy. Simply understood, the question raised would be: are the flying saucers real pieces of hardware or are they figments of imagination?

Unknown to Arnold in the immediate post-war years, the unidentified flying objects he observed had been constructed in and had taken off from the geographical area beneath which he flew. In his reflections, he would not surmise that he had just witnessed the evidence of an aeronautical secret which had been kept under official wraps for over 20 years. What the veteran pilot of fixed-wing aircraft had watched were his own countrymen piloting a revolutionary breakthrough in aerodynamics, named "round-wing aircraft".

Today, the latest versions of those early round-wing planes which Kenneth Arnold glimpsed over the Cascade Mountains have escaped the bonds of Earth's gravity and, thus weightless, patrol the outer skies of this planet and venture fearlessly into the realms of vast space.

At this juncture, before the wider explanation of the intriguing aerial phenomenon is revealed, the average reader will recognise this unanswered riddle. Never has it been told to laymen the identities of the thousands of aerial sightings seen by professional airmen and ordinary spectators in the last half of this century.

To state the conundrum briefly, the so-called flying saucers seen by Arnold and countless others across the globe were called "unidentified flying objects" by the United States Air Force. The terminology became commonplace but deceptive. Hence the shorter euphemism, UFOs, was used to describe such aerial sightings the world over. This being so, the reader will first become acquainted with four identifiable aerial happenings which have been declassified. They are all researched and documented cases from the years 1947, 1948 and 1955, and are actual crash landings and subsequent encounters with beings from other worlds.

Following these reports, the story will be revealed of the round-wing plane as it was developed on planet Earth. And when the revelation is unfolded, quite imperceptibly, the following conclusion will dawn on most readers.

The genesis of a new age has already begun for Earthlings. And it is self-evident: we are late in joining the interplanetary creatures who have ventured into the vastness of the universe in search of other intelligent beings...

Case Number Four: United States Receives Visit from Beyond Earth

Washington, DC, February 18, 1975; time, 10 pm. A hovering squadron of high-altitude lights had just placed America's capitol under a blanket of surveillance. Before departing, they would send shivers through the security surrounding US President Gerald Ford, and their mission would also change the USA's scientific thrust in outer space within 60 days.

On this winter's night in question, the sky over Washington was clear and visibility was excellent. High above at 50,000 feet, 12 unidentified and stationary lights had appeared. The lights were not celestial bodies, mirages or balloons, nor were they conventional aircraft. They were, in fact, UFOs—a name first applied in 1966 by the US Air Force to describe growing numbers of unidentified flying objects sighted around the globe.

At the three major airports around Washington, several monitor systems handle traffic and also act as an early warning vigilance for unidentified aircraft. There is the AACS, i.e., Aircraft and Airways Communication System, the sophisticated radar at Andrews Air Force Base, the GPR (Ground Position Radar), etc. Therefore, besides untrained street personnel who spotted the mysterious lights, there were also the competent operators of the AACS, Andrews Air Force Base radar and GPR, who were continuously watching the activities of the unidentified flying objects.

At 10.16, one of the lights detached itself from the formation and, peeling off to the right, dropped toward the city. Its colour changed from blue to white. In a park in Georgetown, the northwest section of the capitol, the light landed and as it went out there appeared in its place a solid object. Standing where the light had been was a 30-foot, saucer-like object with dome, supported by tripod legs.

Underneath the craft, a door opened from which stairs extended to the ground and an ordinary-looking being with occidental features descended. The six-foot-tall man moved briskly away from the perimeter of the craft and evaporated before his viewers. As he did so, curious onlookers, who had seen the craft's landing in their neighbourhood, ran toward the machine. But 10 feet away from the craft, an

"If it turns out there is a parallel universe, does that mean there are two Gods?"

THE TWILIGHT ZONE

invisible force-field kept the sightseers away. The hatch closed, and the machine stood isolated and alone.

About 10.20, after the being had departed from the craft, there simultaneously appeared a stranger before the security guard at the street entrance to the White House. In perfect English, he asked to see President Ford. The being's request was refused.

At approximately 10.21, a being in a flight suit was seen walking down the hallway to the Oval Room. A Secret Service man challenged the figure from behind. It continued on. A bullet from the gun of the President's guard apparently passed through the being without drawing blood.

At the next instant, the stranger disappeared from the view of the Secret Service pursuer and silently passed through the locked and closed door to the Oval Room. Thereupon it stopped in front of President Ford, working alone at his desk. The startled President looked up at the figure of a tall, slim man with black hair, dressed in what appeared to be a trim flight-suit of silver-coloured jacket and pants tucked into calf-length boots.

The being spoke calmly: "President Ford, I am sorry to intrude in such an unearthly way, but I have a message of great importance which must be told." He continued: "I am a scientist from Earth's sister planet Venus, which, regardless of Earth's scientific postulations, is inhabited by a people identical to those like yourself on Earth. But my mission in being here tonight concerns special knowledge which others in this solar system have elected to give the United States as our chosen custodian for planet Earth."

Much of the alien's conversation remains classified, but some of the subject matter has been verified from executive sources. In general, the visitor spoke of the dawning of a new age for Earth in science, medicine and other wonders—but hinged his remarks with a single admonition: "Earth must first denounce nuclear war." The verdict of the outer-terrestrial stemmed from an inerrant moral law of the universe, which Earth nations had broken by splitting the atom to destroy their fellow men.

Almost an hour later, the outer-terrestrial departed. Upon leaving, he placed on the President's desk a dull, silvery object of elliptical shape with rounded edges. The stranger called it a Venusian book—a gift from his planet to America.

Simultaneously, several miles away, the being re-entered the vehicle in which he had come. It took off and joined the lights above, at which time the formation disappeared off the radar screens of the nation's capitol.

This meeting between an outer-terrestrial being and a world leader is only one of the hundreds recorded since Earth's first nuclear explosion took place in 1945. American presidents alone have had a minimum of 60 visits.

Earth has been watched by outsiders for at least 45 millenniums, and throughout the pre-Adamite civilisations. According to their spokesmen, they have witnessed this latest civilisation's advent of the railroad, the discovery of electricity, the aeroplane and auto, the rocket, the smashing of the atom and, lately, the fearful number of nuclear test explosions. And, finally, the uncontrolled aggressions of nations to make their own atomic bombs—with intentions to deploy them.

As the President picked up the object and examined it that night of February 18, 1975, he called for Secret Service personnel. He also asked for the Secretary of State and scheduled a meeting of the General Staff to be held at the Pentagon as soon as possible to evaluate the disc.

During the presidential dialogue, the extra-terrestrial being declared the US Air Force should learn the formula encased in the disc. Mr Ford had gingerly examined the object, but laid it down, perplexed as to why the alien should leave such an indecipherable thing as a parting gesture. Was it really a goodwill gift of science from another world, or was it some diabolical, destructive force that might enslave onlookers or destroy a city?

Like his predecessors going back to Franklin D. Roosevelt, President Ford must have asked himself some startling questions about this peaceful outer-terrestrial invasion, whose spokesmen looked human and acted like friends, notwithstanding that their arrivals were always without warning or prior signal.

And, in a broader sense, US officialdom was also asking, "Why all the sudden attention which Earth was now receiving after years of comparative isolation?" Even more perplexing questions were being asked by the suspicious military and science worlds. If these outer-terrestrials were so advanced scientifically and metaphysically, what did they know about the future destiny of mankind that made them suddenly want to share their knowledge with a single nation, the USA?

Aside from these basic quandaries, other sobering judgments had already been established—which authorities had long hesitated to pass on, and for an understandable reason. Those claiming to come from our solar system and even beyond were often nearly identical to certain Earth races in appearance and in biological, functional and mental ways.

Obviously, there existed a correlation between Earth beings and inhabitants from certain other planets.

As President Ford may have pondered these revelations that historic night, he was well aware that alien ships of countless origins were now bridging the time and distance barrier between various planets in the universe, the knowledge of which leading nations of the world had denied the public. Furthermore, appraisal of the combined worldwide UFO phenomenon by military consultants was singularly conclusive. They concluded that all of planet Earth was under systematic surveillance by three distinct classifications of alien intruders. Those were labelled: (1) friendly, (2) presumed hostile, and (3) unknown.

Category (1), friendly. The craft were usually round winged in shape, originating within our solar system. Their human occupants have openly made themselves known to certain Earth governments and their leaders from time to time (such as the foregoing visit to President Ford). The same outer-terrestrials have also occasionally appeared by accident; for example, the Captain Mantell incident over Goodman Field, Kentucky, in 1948 [case number three].

Category (2), presumed hostile. These aliens generally came in round-wing planes and were of human resemblance from diminutive sizes to over six feet in height. They had, on occasion, attempted to infiltrate Earth by establishing hidden bases in remote areas, and their spacecraft were also engaged in mapping Earth and other questionable activities. It is believed they originated from one planet or constellation; for example, the Farmington affair of 1955 [case number one].

Category (3), unknowns. Unknowns were patrolling Earth skies and watching our people and military installations increasingly in the late 1970s (see chapter XVII, "Strangers in Our Skies"). They arrived in spacecraft of various dimensions and shapes, up to 1,000 feet long. Occupants were observed to be of a variety of physiological descriptions, some of which, by Earth's standards, bordered on the ridiculous or grotesque, according to their own admissions which were delivered telepathically to Air Force pilots and airport controllers, etc. Observations of their spacecraft by competent observers suggested that their space technology may be more advanced than that of this solar system.

But one repetitious warning was delivered by all the friendly outer-terrestrials with whom physical and voice contact had been made. According to informed Air Force sources, that constant warning stated a nuclear holocaust on Earth was possible within a generation unless immediate plans were made now to prevent it.

Alien Planet in our Solar System

As President Ford may have reflected on the promise of sudden increased knowledge for this world in exchange for abandoning the international nuclear race, 2,700 scientists, engineers, physicists, astronomers, geophysicists, mathematicians, geologists and radio engineers were occupied 24 hours a day at the Goddard [Space Flight] Center in Maryland, keeping watch on a more disturbing phenomenon.

A magnetically weak but inhabited alien planet, over twice the size of Earth, had wandered into our solar system and attached itself to the force-field between the Sun and the Earth. By the year 2000, this incoming intruder could possibly regress the climate, where a third of the world's people are located, toward another ice age. Its effects were particularly being felt in the northern latitudes, where teams of American, Canadian, Japanese and Russian meteorologists and weathermen daily gathered the evidence of an abrupt change in world weather patterns.

But, underlying these hidden discoveries and new knowledge of outer space, the real question being asked by the world's leaders was how to tell the public without creating panic. Collective scientific minds working on the secret already were aware of these explosive truths and the problems they presented. But how much of the biased viewpoints of our history, religion, philosophy and science would have to be discarded in order to make way for the new 20th-century revelations?

These revelations clearly indicate that Earthlings are not isolated but in fact are part of an interplanetary league of intelligent creatures. Our counterparts from planets nearby and other destinations light years away are trying to give warring Earth nations a message. The aliens are telling us to stop the nuclear race and destroy our stockpiles before we destroy our planet and its civilisations. In return for heeding this advice, they would provide Earthmen with the advanced technological, scientific and medical secrets of the Universe.

Editor's Note:

This extract has been slightly edited for publication here. The full 450-page manuscript is available as an e-book from the Onelight.com Publishing website, <http://www.onelight.com>. A 135-page section is available free at <http://www.onelight.com/GenesisForTheNewSpaceAge.pdf>.

REVIEWS

BOOKS

Reviewed by Ruth Parnell

THE TEMPLAR PIRATES: The Secret Alliance to Build the New Jerusalem by Ernesto Frers

Destiny Books, Rochester, VT, USA, 2007 (pub. in Spanish as Piratas y Templarios, Ediciones Robinbook, Barcelona, 2005) ISBN 1-59477-146-4 (183pp tpb) Available: <http://www.DestinyBooks.com>

Piracy has been around for as long as seafaring and has played its part in the unfolding of history since four millennia ago when Egyptian and Phoenician cargo ships were first targeted. In the sixth century BC, it became an organised method of plundering and subjugating coastal and island peoples in the Aegean and Mediterranean seas.

This is the launching point for mediaeval historian Ernesto Frers, but his prime interest here is in the role of the Knights Templar. The Norman Templar king Roger II of Sicily was the first to fly the so-called Jolly Roger flag (the skull and crossbones) in defiance of the pope in 1127, but it was not until their excommunication by Pope Clement V in 1307 that the Templars turned to maritime piracy in a big way. This was after they received a tip-off ahead of a raid by French king Philip IV's troops and decided to flee their port of La Rochelle. Their divided fleet headed for disparate destinations: Portugal, Scotland and the New World, where, later, with Henry Sinclair's backing, they established colonies in a bid to build a New Jerusalem, free of papist control. Indeed, the Templars' piracy for hundreds of years was part of their secret war against the Holy See, and their efforts were bolstered by opportunistic buccaneers from the Mediterranean to the Caribbean.

Frers traces the influence of the remnant Templars in the expeditions of Christopher Columbus, Francis Drake and Walter Raleigh as well as French Huguenot buccaneers who started their own libertarian brotherhood. The pirate knights and their brothers also influenced the rise of the revolutionary movements in France and America along with the growth of Freemasonry, four of whose members—Franklin, Jefferson, Adams and Paine—helped to write the US Declaration of Independence. These are fascinating undercurrents with occult offshoots which Frers brings to light, and they present a different picture from "official" history.

THE LORDS OF AVARIS: Uncovering the Legendary Origins of Western Civilisation

by David Rohl

Century, London, UK, 2007 ISBN 1-7126-7762-3 (524pp hc)

Available: see www.randomhouse.co.uk

The origins of Western civilisation are traditionally sourced in Classical Greece and Rome, cultures that are traceable to the Heroic Age of ancient Minoan Crete, Mycenaean Greece and Trojan Anatolia (Turkey). But what if the myths of minotaurs and labyrinths, Trojan warriors and Cyclopean citadels were not just the stuff of Homeric legend but historical narratives?

Archaeologist David Rohl (The Lost Testament, NEXUS 10/02) has managed to bring these myths to life by applying the same New Chronology (NC) he proposed in his 1995 book A Test of Time, which gives a radical down-dating of Egyptian history by deleting three centuries of "artificial time" from the New Kingdom and the Third Intermediate Period. But not only does his NC offer an historical timeline for the Old Testament narratives, it places the Heroic legends in their proper context.

The scene begins in the second millennium BC, following a catastrophe and subsequent famine that destroyed many Middle Eastern cities and ended the Early Bronze Age. It's the time when Indo-European-speaking tribes from the north, who became the Hittites and the later founders of the Greek, Persian and Roman empires, began their invasions of Mesopotamia and Egypt, thus creating a three-way struggle. Starting with the Hyksos who ruled in Avaris in the Nile Delta, Rohl takes the reader on an epic journey through 2,000 years of history, ending with the foundation of Rome by the Trojan hero Aeneas. On the way, among other events he explains the sudden appearance of the Etruscans in Hesperia (Italy). Rohl's superbly illustrated book complements his richly detailed text. A tour de force.

